

Mineral of the Month Club Newsletter

June 2017

Featured Mineral: Another first for Mineral of the Month club members, Fire Opal from Mexico. Fire opal is a term used for colorful, transparent to translucent opal with bright, fire-like hues of yellow to orange to red. Many people will keep their opals in water due to the fact that opal has a high water content and is sometimes subject to “crazing” or dehydration soon after it is mined. It is a sub-variety of opal and is considered a *mineraloid.

Rock Hound Tid Bits: * You can read about why fire opal is considered a “mineraloid” on pages 7 and 8 of this month’s write-up.

Monthly Offering: Chabazite from Canada is the monthly offering. The matrixes consist of sharp, lustrous crystals. The crystals are translucent and twinned with visually pleasing growth patterns that make for an interesting display piece to collect.

You can purchase larger sizes of the Monthly Featured mineral as well as the Monthly Offering minerals at www.celestialearthminerals.com. Just click on the Monthly Offerings tab to shop for both.
